Hot Off the Press Environmental News

Most of us know about the Green New Deal and its efforts to combat climate change, but do you know about the Climate Majority Project's proposal of Net-Zero Carbon by 2050? It is a national proposal that has major pension funds asking electric utilities to produce all electricity via renewable energies by 2050. This is a huge undertaking and you can follow it as it plays out on a national scale by going to Google, entering "Climate Majority Project," and adding your email address to the "Stay Informed" box. Projects like this one and the Green New Deal are hopeful signs that future generations will still have a livable planet. This message is supported by the Social Action Committee and Arlington Street members of Mothers Out Front.
